

Grief isn't so much

grappling with a thing
as with the absence of a thing.

It is a battle with nothingness.

We barely noticed when the
person was there;

they were woven

into our world.

Suddenly they disappear,
and we realize the empty gulf in
our heart

they had occupied.

ERIC TONJES

EITHER WAY, WE'LL BE ALL RIGHT